The Word on the Street

During April, The Haddonfield Fortnightly and the Public Library will encourage Borough residents to read Remarkably Bright Creatures by Shelby Van Pelt.

What one book would you want to have with you if stranded on a desert island? Or what one book would you really like your friends to read?

◀ "I'd like everyone to read Killers of the Flower Moon by David Grann," says Maggie Gammie of Cherry Hill. "It offers a different and very powerful perspective on Native American history and the transition to the reservation system."

▲ "I would recommend Thinking, Fast and Slow by Daniel Kahneman," says BOB MILLER of Haddonfield. "It's about why smart people do dumb things. Not an easy read, but worthwhile."

◀ "On an island, I'd be happy to have Janson's History of Art," says DICK EASTWICK of Cherry Hill. "Whenever I pick it up, I always learn something new about art, architecture, or sculpture."

▶ If Haddonfield's FRAN MILER were stranded on an island, she'd like to have Theo of Golden by Allen Levi. "It's so full of love and compassion. It's about caring for others."

▶ "I don't know if it exists," says ANDREW GREEN of Moorestown, "but if I were marooned I'd want to have something like Surviving on a Desert Island with Minimal Resources ... for Dummies."

▲ The book that GINNY DeLONG of Haddonfield would want to have with her on a desert island would be A Prayer for Owen Meany by John Irving. "It's about destiny and friendship," says Ginny. "Every time I read it, I get something new and different from it."

Post 38 Last Man's Club Dinner set for April 7

Company B of the First Minnesota Volunteer Infantry Regiment departed Stillwater MN at the outbreak of the Civil War with 101 men. When the survivors returned to Stillwater for a reunion in 1885, only 34 remained. The veterans decided to meet annually on July 21 – the anniversary of the Battle of Bull Run. They named their group the Last Man's Club, and purchased an expensive bottle of burgundy wine that would remain unopened until just one of their number survived. When the second-to-last man died in 1930, the honor of opening the bottle fell to Charles Lockwood, age 87 – the Last Man.

Following the end of World War I, veterans across the country formed Last Man clubs, principally to maintain the bonds of comradeship they had forged during the war. On April 22, 1940, at a gathering to celebrate the 21st anniversary of the formation of Haddonfield American Legion Post 38 – and just a few months after the outbreak of hostilities in Europe that would lead to World War II – 108 veterans of World War I organized a Last Man's Club and identified four purposes:

- First, To preserve our memories of 1917-18
- Second, To pay fitting tribute to our departed comrades
- Third, To foster and perpetuate good comradeship
- Fourth,To eat drink and be merry.

The charter called for "a bottle of rare brandy ... to remain unopened until our ranks have thinned to the last three men," at which time "the bottle shall be opened and a toast offered to those comrades who have gone before."

In 1987, with five members surviving, it was decided not to wait until the next two passed away. Each member took a few sips of cognac during that year's Last Man's Club dinner. The bottle was resealed and remained so until, at the dinner on April 5, 1993, Robert Wright stood alone. "I didn't think I'd ever make it," Wright told the Philadelphia Inquirer a week before the event. "Then," the Inquirer reported, "the soft-spoken, white-haired veteran smiled wryly and added: 'At least I think I will.'" Robert Wright died on January 19, 1998, at age 98.

Post 38 has active Last Man's Club charters for World War II; Korea; Vietnam; Korea and Vietnam (combined); Desert Shield, Desert Storm, and Iraq; and Lebanon, Grenada, Panama, Somalia, Bosnia, and Haiti.

Don Beck, age 97 (US Army), and Tom Reilly, 100 (US Merchant Marine) are the two remaining signatories of Post 38's World War II Last Man's Charter.

YOUR EYES ARE AT RISK!
A Hidden Danger Behind High Blood Sugar

A simple eye exam can reveal more than vision changes – it can uncover early signs of diabetes.

Diabetic retinopathy occurs when high blood sugar damages the tiny blood vessels in the retina. What's important is this: Those changes can often be seen during a comprehensive eye exam – sometimes before a person knows they have diabetes or even pre-diabetes.

The best view of the retina is from instruments such as the Optos widefield retinal imaging camera, which we recently acquired.

In the early stages, there may be no symptoms at all. You could be seeing clearly while silent damage is beginning. Left untreated, it can lead to blurred vision or even permanent sight loss. But caught early, steps can be taken to protect both your vision and overall health.

That's why regular diabetic retinopathy screenings are so important – especially if you have a family history of diabetes, are overweight, or haven't had a recent physical.

An eye exam doesn't just check how well you see. It may help protect your health.

Slavery and emancipation

› In 1791, Hugh Creighton, tavern-keeper of an inn (now known as the Indian King Tavern on Haddonfield's main street) retired, and subsequently manumitted (freed) a young enslaved worker named Flora.

On Sat Mar 21 from 2pm, a panel of four speakers at the Indian King Tavern Museum will discuss the fates of formerly enslaved South Jersey residents like Flora: "Finding Flora's Footsteps."

- Joella Clamen, an historic interpreter at the Museum, will introduce the history of the building and what is known of its enslaved residents, including Flora.
- Author Jo Ann Laughlin, current resident of a house once occupied by tavern-keeper Hugh Creighton's daughter, will present original research detailed in her 2024 book Stratton Hall: A House with a Name. The book offers an intriguing look into the possible destinies of Flora and her children as founding members of an historic free Black community in Woolwich NJ.
- Founder Avis Wanda McClinton and researcher Shamele Jordan, of the 339 Manumissions and Beyond Project, will shed light on genealogical research to uncover the wider history of enslavement and manumission in Philadelphia and South Jersey.

Space is limited, so arrive early!

All about ONE BOROUGH, ONE BOOK

Read it! Now!

› The Public Library and The Haddon Fortnightly will launch the second annual One Borough, One Book initiative on Wed Apr 1. (No foolin'.)

A slate of programs throughout April will celebrate the bestselling novel Remarkably Bright Creatures by Shelby Van Pelt. This moving and gently humorous novel explores friendship, grief, and unexpected connections – told in part through the eyes of a remarkably perceptive octopus.

The initiative aims to bring the community together through shared reading and engaging activities that celebrate curiosity, creativity, and learning.

On the schedule:

- Something to Chew On: Strategies for Longevity – Wed Apr 8, 12:30pm at the Mabel Kay Senior Center.
- Remarkably Bright Creations: Knit Wit Workshop – Wed Apr 8 at 7pm at The Haddon Fortnightly.
- Sea Creatures: Amazing Features with the Wetlands Institute – Thu Apr 9 at 3:30pm at the Public Library.

Other programs and activities are detailed on the Library's website, here – bit.ly/46VDcKh – or scan the QR ◄.

The book may be purchased at Inkwood Books using the code "One Book."

All are encouraged to join the conversation and dive into a month of ocean-inspired discovery. One Borough, One Book is generously sponsored by The Haddonfield Foundation.
